This might not be a Ubisoft issue, but there are two things you can do: Get hold of an older install disk, and try the same thing Remove C:\Users\YourUserName\AppData\Local\Tomb Raider (You can remove this folder safely) A: I was having the same issue and searching for solutions. Ubisoft and Steam did not give any other solution than what you are suggesting, and I tried your suggestion. I ended up doing the following: I played the game first, before the update and simply got this black screen after a few minutes (so after the update was loaded). Then I restarted the computer and played with the following: No USB-enabled (e.g., keyboards, mice, headsets, other peripherals) All USB non-enabled (e.g., ATA, DVD-R, DVD+R, etc.) Disabled "Universal Plug and Play" option (can do on windows 8) Resetted my Windows (I am using Windows 8) Removed and reinstalled the Steam application (and then the game) What worked for me: Playing the game when it was first installed. The problem finally stopped.
