I can check the risk of 1 image by comparing the intersection of two images to the background image, as this is the only image I want to accept (the user clicking on all other images will be rejected by my system). After working on it for a long time I have come up with the below function which works really well. The problem is when I try to return an array of objects as that data is too large for my server to handle so I need to return it in chunks. How could I take advantage of the lodash#intersection method to return combined (halved) results to reflect this? const findSubIntersection = (background, input) => { return _.flatten(input.map(i) => { return _.intersection(background, i); })); }; A: Seems like you're looking for _reduce( input, (results, item) => { return results.concat(_intersection( 3da54e8ca3
